All about Accrington:

Located in East Lancashire.

Population 36,679

4 miles east of Blackburn

6 miles west of Burnley

13 miles east of Preston

20 miles north of Manchester

Commonly abbreviated by locals to "Accy"

One well-known association the town has is with the 'Accrington Pals', the nickname given to the smallest home town battalion of volunteers formed to fight in the First World War.

Accrington is a former centre of the cotton and textile machinery industry.

The town is famed for manufacturing the hardest and densest bricks in the world, "The Accrington NORI" (iron), which were used in the construction of the Empire State Building and for the foundations of Blackpool Tower;

The Haworth Art Gallery holds Europe's largest collection of Tiffany glass.
